Introduction

Telemedicine involves the use of electronic communications to enable health care providers at different locations to share individual patient medical/dental information for the purpose of improving patient care. Providers may include primary care clinicians, specialists, and/or subspecialists. The information may be used for diagnosis, therapy, follow-up and/or education, and may include any of the following:

- Patient medical/dental records
- Medical images
- Live two-way audio and video
- Output data from medical devices and sound and video files

Electronic systems used will incorporate network and software security protocols to protect the confidentiality of patient identification and imaging data and will include measures to safeguard the data and to ensure its integrity against intentional or unintentional corruption.

Expected Benefits:

- Improved access to medical/dental care by enabling a patient to remain in his/her clinician's office (or at a remote site) while the clinician obtains test results and consults from healthcare practitioners at distant/other sites.
- More efficient medical/dental evaluation and management.
- Obtaining expertise of a distant specialist.

Possible Risks:

As with any medical/dental procedure, there are potential risks associated with the use of telemedicine. These risks include, but may not be limited to:

- In rare cases, information transmitted may not be sufficient (e.g. poor resolution of images) to allow for appropriate medical decision making by the physician and consultant(s);
- Delays in medical evaluation and treatment could occur due to deficiencies or failures of the equipment;
- In very rare instances, security protocols could fail, causing a breach of privacy of personal medical information;
- In rare cases, a lack of access to complete medical/dental records may result in adverse drug interactions or allergic reactions or other judgment errors;

6. I understand that it is my duty to inform my clinician of electronic interactions regarding my care that I may have with other healthcare providers.
7. I understand that I may expect the anticipated benefits from the use of telemedicine in my care, but that no results can be guaranteed or assured.
